RUGBY SCHOOL was founded in the year 1567, by LAWRENCE SHERIFFE, a native of Rugby, "to serve chiefly for the children of Rugby and Brownsover, and next for such as bee of other places thereunto adjoining."

The School Register, in which the names of the Boys admitted to the School are inserted, commences in the year 1675, and has been continued without intermission down to the present time. From a reference to it the School appears even thus early to have been in considerable repute, and the names occur of several boys living at a distance from Rugby.

The foundation was at that time extended beyond the original limits of Rugby and Brownsover, in compliance with the Founder's intent, and comprised the neighbouring villages of Bilton, Clifton, Newbold, and Hillmorton.

In the year 1777 the foundation included all places lying within five measured miles of Rugby. A further extension has been since made, and the foundation limits now comprehend all places lying within the distance of ten measured miles from Rugby, in the County of Warwick, and five miles from Rugby in the Counties of Leicester and Northampton.

The Foundationers are distinguished in the early part of the Register by the adjunct of the letter f to their names.

Though the names of the Trustees are not inserted in the Register, a list, collected from other sources, is given from the year 1602 to the present time.

A list of the Masters has likewise been preserved from a very early period.

MASTERS OF RUGBY SCHOOL.

THE HEAD MASTERS,

AS FAR BACK AS THEY CAN BE TRACED.

1602. Nicholas Greenhill.
Augustine Rolfe.
W. Green.
1642. Raphael Pearce, died in 1651.
Peter Whitehead.
John Allen, died in 1669.
1669. Knightly Harrison, M. A. resigned in 1674.
1674. Robert Ashbridge, M. A. resigned in 1681.
1681. Leonard Peacock, M. A. died in 1687.
1687. Henry Holyoak, M. A. died in 1731, having presided over the School forty-four years.
In his time the School was in the highest repute, and the names occur in the Register of many boys, sons of the nobility and county families, both in the vicinity and at a distance from Rugby.
1731. John Plomer, M. A. resigned in 1742.
1742. Thomas Crossfield, M. A. died in 1744.
1744. William Knail, D. D. resigned in 1751.

1751. John Richmond, D. D. resigned in 1755. He died in January, 1816, at Newnham, in the County of Southampton, at the advanced age of ninety-eight. He was first an Assistant Master under Dr. Knail, at which period the number of boys did not exceed 70. At the time of his death the School had attained to its greatest height in point of numbers, there being three hundred and eighty-one boys at School.
1755. Stanley Burrough, M. A. resigned in 1778.
1778. Thomas James, D. D. Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, was educated at Eton. While there the third Inscription in Akenside's Poems beginning with "Whoever thou art, &c." was set as an exercise to be translated into Greek verse. James's translation, which may be found in the second volume of the Musæ Etonenses, published by Herbert, page 22nd, was sent to the author of the Pleasures of Imagination, and in acknowledgement of its merit, and of the compliment paid to his own poem, Akenside sent as a present to the translator a copy of Homer's Iliad, in 2. vols. 4to. In his time the Prizes for Greek and Latin verse composition had not been instituted at Cambridge, but he was "Member's Prizeman" in 1772 and 1773, and was appointed Tutor to his College at a very early age. The highest number of Boys at one time under this accomplished scholar and excellent master, was two hundred and forty-five, which number was for the first time exceeded under Dr. Wooll, in 1810. After continuing at Rugby sixteen years, and raising the School to the highest degree of celebrity, his health being impaired by his unremitting exertions, he resigned the situation in 1794, and on the application of the Trustees to Mr. Pitt, then Prime Minister, he was shortly afterwards preferred to a Prebendal Stall in the Cathedral Church of Worcester. He died in the month of September, 1804, and his remains were interred in the Cathedral, where a mural tablet has been placed to his memory. An elegant piece of sculpture, by Chantrey, representing his full length figure, has been erected by a subscription of his pupils, in the School Chapel. The inscription on the plinth was written by his most distinguished scholar the present Bishop of Lichfield.

1794. Henry Ingles, D. D. formerly Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, "Member's Prizeman" in 1774. He was at first Master of Macclesfield School, from whence he was elected to Rugby. He resigned the Head Mastership in 1806.
1807. John Wooll, D. D. formerly Fellow of New College, Oxford, and sometime Master of Midhurst School, Sussex. Author of Memoirs of the Life of Wharton. During his Mastership the School was entirely rebuilt. Of Dr. Wooll it may truly be said that he exhibited such a happy union of firmness and discipline with amenity of manners, that he had rarely occasion to resort to that extremity of punishment, expulsion, either private or public. The best testimony to his ability as a Master is furnished by the annals of both Universities, in which the credit of the School was well maintained by many distinguished pupils. He resigned his situation in 1827, and died at Worthing, Nov. 23, 1833. His excellent qualities will live in the hearts of those who knew him, so long as any of them survive, and need no other memorial than that of affectionate and grateful feeling: but to perpetuate his worth, and testify their veneration for his character, his pupils have erected a monument to his memory in the School Chapel. The work is a full length figure in a sitting posture, executed with great taste and skill by Westmacott the younger. The inscription on the tablet is from the pen of the learned Head Master of Repton School, who was educated under Dr. Wooll.

1828. Thomas Arnold, D. D. formerly Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. He gained a First Class in Classics in 1814, the English Prize Essay in 1815, and the Latin Prize Essay in 1817.

* AMBROSE CAVE, a Brigadier in the Life Guards, was unfortunately slain, 1690, as he was sitting peaceably in his chair in public company, by one BIRON, an officer, whose life he had frequently spared, though many provocations had caused frequent skirmishing between them; and in return for his generosity, Mr. BIRON ran his sword through his back as he sat in his chair, of which wound he soon died. The sword was left in his body, but the offender fled, and no diligence could discover him.

† Thomas Carte is supposed to have been born at Clifton-upon-Dunsmore, near Rugby. He took his degree of M. A. at Cambridge after leaving Rugby, and entered into orders. His first publication was a defence of Charles I from the charge of being privy to the Irish Massacre. At the accession of George the First he refused the oaths. He was afterwards secretary to Bishop Atterbury, and when that Prelate was committed to the Tower, a reward of £1000. was offered for apprehending Mr. Carte, who escaped to France, where he remained till Queen Caroline obtained permission for him to return to England. In 1736 appeared his life of James, Duke of Ormond, in 3 vols. folio. He next published a History of England, in 3 vols. folio. The fourth, which ends with 1654, appeared after his death. His accuracy was such that he has been called "the Historian of Facts," and Hume borrowed largely from the work. Besides the above he published a Collection of Original Letters and Papers relating to the Affairs of England, in 2 vols. 8vo. a History of the Revolutions of Portugal, and some other pieces. His manuscripts are in the Bodleian Library. Carte died in the year 1754, and was buried in a vault in the chancel of Yattendon Church Berkshire. His works however constitute his only monument.

* Edward Cave was born at Newton, near Rugby. When nine years old he was placed at Rugby School, which was then in high reputation. His mistress however by some invisible means having lost a favourite cock, he was stigmatized as the thief, and from that time Mr. Holyoake treated him with harshness, and under pretence that Cave obstructed the discipline of the school by assisting the idlers, he was oppressed with unreasonable tasks, and when his diligence had surmounted them no regard was paid to the performance. Cave in consequence left the school. He then became clerk in the Excise, but soon left that situation and came to London, where he put himself apprentice to a printer. On the expiration of his time he obtained a place in the Post Office, though he still continued at intervals to follow his business. He corrected the Gradus ad Parnassum, and wrote for the newspapers. On being dismissed from his place for resisting abuses in the privilege of franking, he projected, in the year 1731, the Gentleman's Magazine, a periodical which has continued to be carried on ever since, and is held in considerable repute. In the editing of this work he engaged the celebrated Dr. Samuel Johnson to assist him. Cave died in 1754, and was buried in St. James's Church, Clerkenwell. His life was afterwards written by Johnson. On the north side of the church tower at Rugby the tomb of his father is to be seen, with the following epitaph on the top of it by Dr. Hawkesworth:—

Near this place lies the body of JOSEPH CAVE,
 who departed this life Nov. 7, 1747,
 aged 80 years.
 He was placed by Providence
 in an humble station, but Industry abundantly supplied his wants and Temperance blessed him with Content and Health.
 As he was an affectionate father
 he was made happy in the decline of life
 by the deserved eminence of his eldest son, EDWARD CAVE,
 who, without interest, fortune, or connexions,
 by the native force of his own genius,
 assisted only by a classical education which he received in the Grammar School
 in this town,
 planned, executed, and established,
 a literary work called the Gentleman's Magazine, whereby he acquired an ample fortune,
 the whole of which devolved to his family.

† John Mansel in early life joined the regiment of the Third Dragoon, Guards, and rose to the rank of Major-General. He had the command of a brigade of heavy cavalry in the Duke of York's campaign in 1794. Being impatient on one occasion of an undeserved imputation on his zeal, the General, when the French attacked the Duke of York's army on the 26th of April, devoted himself to death, and his troops animated by his example performed prodigies of valour. He came up with the enemy in the village of Cawdry, charged, and completely defeated them. He then rushed at the head of his brigade against a battery of fourteen pieces of cannon, placed on an eminence behind a deep ravine, into which many of the front rank fell. He passed the ravine with a considerable body of men, and charged the cannon with inconceivable intrepidity and complete success. This event is said to have decided the day, but at the mouth of this battery the brave and worthy General, after having three horses killed under him in the course of the day, received his death wound, one grape shot entered his chin, fracturing the spine and coming out between the shoulders, and another broke his arm to splinters. His son and aid de camp the present Major John Christopher Mansel (also a Rugbeian, see year 1781), anxious to save his father's life, darted forwards, but was wounded and taken prisoner. On the 29th the General was buried in a redoubt at the head of the camp. Six Generals supported the pall, and the Duke of York, the Stadholder, the hereditary Prince of Orange, and all the officers of the army attended the funeral.

* William Bray was born at Shere, in Surrey, on the 7th of November, 1736. He was descended from Sir Nicolas Bray, the faithful minister of Henry the Seventh, and in the tenth year of his age was placed at Rugby School. Whilst at school he found some difficulty in gratifying his passion for reading.

there being in his days no regular bookseller at Rugby. An itinerant bookseller from Daventry was however accustomed to open a stall at Rugby on market days, to whom the boys resorted. A number of the Rambler, which was then in the course of publication, having fallen into Bray's hands, he ordered the same from the Daventry bookseller, who mistaking his commission procured all the numbers which had then appeared, these amounting to the sum of nine shillings, completely exhausted Bray's purse, and as he in after life was wout to declare, nearly ruined him. On his leaving school he was articled to an attorney, and at the termination of his clerkship he obtained a situation in the Board of Green Cloth, which he continued to hold for near fifty years. In 1801, on the death of Mr. Manning, who had commenced a History of Surrey, Mr. Bray undertook to complete the same, and composed the whole of the second and third volumes of that work, the latter of which was published in the year 1814. In 1803 he was elected treasurer to the Antiquarian Society. Several of his papers are published in the Archæologia. For many years before his death he was the oldest Rugbeian living, and until he was obliged to desist through age, was a constant attendant at the Rugby School meetings in London, and always retained an affectionate regard for his own school. He closed a life actively and usefully engaged at the age of ninety-seven, on the 21st December, 1832, at Shere. A mural monument is erected to his memory in the church of Shere.

* Sir Ralph Abercromby was born in the year 1738. He was descended from an ancient family in the County of Banff. When ten years old he was placed at Rugby. While there "Duke William" of Cumberland, the hero of Culloden, was on one occasion passing through Hillmorton and Dunchurch in his carriage and six, a circumstance which twenty years since some of the old inhabitants of Rugby used to speak of as one of the most memorable events of their lives; and it is recorded that all the boys in the school ran over to see him with the exception of Abercromby. On leaving Rugby he obtained his first commission, and continued actively engaged in the service of his country for forty-five years. He was employed on the Continent under the Duke of York in 1796, and was shortly afterwards appointed Commander-in-Chief of the forces in the West Indies, where he took possession of several French and Dutch settlements. He was next fixed on to take the command of the troops in Ireland, where he exerted himself with great ability in suppressing the rebellion. He was lastly called upon to take the command of an army to dispossess the French of Egypt. Here he landed with the troops March 8, 1801, and defeated the French at Aboukir after a bloody action. On the 21st of the same month was fought near Alexandria a memorable battle, in which the English were again victorious, but with the loss of their gallant General, who died the 28th, on board the ship which was conveying him to Malta, in the great church of which Island he was buried with military honours. A marble slab with an inscription denotes the place of his interment. A public monument was voted to his memory, and a Peerage and pension bestowed upon his family. In 1774 Sir Ralph represented the County of Kinross in Parliament, and continued in that capacity till the general election in 1780. He was father to the present Speaker of the House of Commons. Such was the affection Sir Ralph entertained for the place of his education, that he was actually on the point of setting out to pay a long contemplated visit to his old school, when he was stopped by a notification of his appointment to the command of the troops embarking for Egypt, where his life was so gloriously closed.

§ Archibald Stewart Douglas, afterwards Lord Douglas, of Douglas and Bothwell Castles, who after one of the greatest litigations ever known, succeeded to the immense possessions of his uncle, the last Duke of Douglas, 1769. The Duke's only sister, Lady Jane Douglas, married at the age of forty-seven Colonel Stewart, afterwards Sir John Stewart, Bart. by whom, at Paris, in 1748, she had twin sons, Archibald and Sholto, the latter of whom died an infant. But the family of Hamilton, who were the next collateral heirs male, suspected the truth of this birth under such extraordinary circumstances, and infused their suspicions into the mind of the aged Duke that the children were supposititious. But at length his Grace seems to have been finally satisfied. He made proper enquiries concerning the birth of Archibald, and saw and conversed with the woman servant that went over to France with his sister, and who was said to have been present at her delivery. It was about this time that an old Scotch servant, probably sent by the Duke of Douglas, came to Rugby. The boys were assembled together in the school by Mr. Burroughs, and this servant, who had never yet seen young Douglas, was introduced amongst them. In a short time he was enabled to identify Archibald, and select him from the other boys from his likeness to the Douglas family. At length the Duke was convinced of his sister's honour, of the legitimacy of her child, and made an entail of his estates accordingly. After the Duke's death, in 1761, an action was commenced in behalf of the Duke of Hamilton, a minor, against Archibald, in which it was suggested that he was not the child of Lady Jane. The great Douglas cause, in consequence of its importance, occupied not only the courts of Scotland, the Judges of which, by a casting vote only, gave their verdict for the Duke of Hamilton, but also the supreme tribunal of England, before which it came by appeal. Such was the fervor this cause occasioned in Scotland that Edinburgh was illuminated for three nights when the House of Lords, in January, 1769, had decided in favour of Mr. Douglas.

APPENDIX.

Page 53. Henry Homer was the intimate friend of Dr. Parr, whom he assisted in the republication of Bellenden's Tracts, in 1787. He was one of the most accomplished Latin scholars this country has ever produced. His splendid edition of Livy was in the press at the time of his death. He also edited Sallust, Pliny, Cæsar, Quintilian, and Persius.

Page 59. Matthew Babington, Tenth Wrangler, 1782, late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

Page 60. John Heyrick, author of a volume of Poems entitled "First Flights," published after his death in 1797.

John Dymoke, late Prebendary of Lincoln, and sixteenth Champion of England. He was called upon to officiate as champion at the coronation of king George the Fourth, but was obliged, owing to his clerical character, to act by deputy, and he therefore appointed his eldest son, the present champion, who fulfilled the duties of the office accordingly.

Page 61. Lewis Dymoke, of Scrivelsby Manor, Lincolnshire, fifteenth Champion of England. Sheriff for Lincolnshire, 1789. Not living in the time of a coronation he had no opportunity of officiating as Champion.

Philip Bracebridge Homer, author of an edition of the Eton Greek Grammar, with English notes. The object of these annotations is to illustrate the principles on which many of the rules were constructed. The editor's remarks are distinguished by great originality and philological acuteness, and tend to throw considerable light on various intricate and difficult questions connected with the earlier forms of the Greek language. Every question is argued with uncommon clearness and perspicuity, and it would be difficult to find in any similar publication so much useful matter condensed within so small a compass, and embodied in a form so intelligible and interesting to the young student. All Rugbeians who were brought into near intercourse with Mr. Homer, will remember him as a scholar of refined accomplishment and exact acquirement, a man of kind hearted liberality, and a christian of unaffected humility.
